Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****. Excerpt from The Omegan, Vol. 1: December, 1924 It is the duty of the college or university to develop the moral and intellectual life of its students. It is useless for a man to go into the world anticipating success if all he has gotten from college is a degree and the ability to get along with people. True success cannot easily be attained by the college graduate unless he has a source of information upon which he can draw, a foundation upon which he can build a rich intellectual life, and a will that will enable him to put across what he attempts. The local chapter should provide ample opportunity for its members to learn how to deal with men. It should most certainly not fail in its task to see that every student secures enough social polish to deal with any type of humanity with ease and grace. It is above all the duty of every fraternity in every institution to develop its members morally and intellectually. It should inspire in them higher ideals and purposes. It should provide for them an environment in which they can live up to these ideals, and in which they can fulfill their purposes. It should help them to get a real sense of moral values. A fraternity should never fail to impress upon its members that the chief aim of every man should be service to his fellows.
