Excerpt from Weathering of Illinois Coals During Storage From these tests we conclude that double-screened coal from No. 5 and No. 6 seams in southern Illinois, in the sizes being supplied to metallurgical coke plants, can be stocked safely in contact with air, and without packing, during the six-months winter period at temperatures prevailing in the Chicago and central Illinois district. In summer appreciable oxidation occurs during storage, although to a greater extent with No. 6 coal than with No. 5. It appears, however, that for best coking results none of these coals should be stocked in the usual storage piles in warm weather longer than 30 days.
