Excerpt: .fewer terraces required and the fact that it is more convenient to cultivate the field in a few broad strips than in a greater number of narrow ones. In other words, they are willing to incur a greater loss by erosion for the sake of greater convenience in cultivation. The slope of the terrace bank, or the ratio of c to d, was found to range from 58 to 121 per cent. It is believed that this bank could be maintained easily at a slope of to 1, or 50 per cent. This would reduce the area of waste land in a terraced field. The curves in figure 4 show the widths of bench for different vertical spacings on land of various slopes. Each curve is drawn for a certain vertical spacing between terraces. The widths of bench are computed for horizontal-bench terraces having a slope of to 1 for the terrace banks. When constructed and maintained properly, bench terraces give excellent protection against erosion. However, many landowners object to this terrace on account of the difficulty of moving farm machinery from one bench to another, the necessity of cultivating each bench separately, the loss of the land occupied by the uncultivated embankments, and the growth of weeds and grass on the embankment, which robs the adjacent cultivated soil of its plant food and tends to seed the entire field to weeds and objectionable grasses. These reasons are sufficient to militate against the use...
