Excerpt: . cutter belonging to Falmouth, and their business was boarding homeward-bound ships to supply clothes to those who preferred walking ashore in a new suit to being seen in sea-stained garments. In fact, their business was to steal a march upon advertising Moses and Son, in which I hope they were entirely successful, for a more civil set of men I never chanced to meet. With great regret I heard of the death of the Captain in a gale on the 22nd August last: a day referred to in the log of the Orion. They were at anchor in Coverack Cove, when the wind setting in furiously from the SB. compelled them to run for Falmouth. Off the Manacles a sea broke on board, and swept the Captain from the helm. At the time this occurred, which was early in the morning, we were in great alarm in Tor Bay, where the wind likewise blew on shore. I well remember the Captain s parting injunction, when pushing off from the side of the Leo. If the wind should come from the SE., get under way as soon as possible and go out to sea. August 12.--Got under way early in the morning, and spent the day in getting to Falmouth, the weather being almost calm, with a burning sun. August 15.--Sailed from Falmouth 1.30 P.m.; wind light and variable between W. and N.; 10.30 P.m. anchored in Fowey Harbour: the last two hours being...
