Its length is sometime; four inches. The shores of the province abound in fish, the greatest proportion of which are excellent eating. The most abundant is the snapper, which varies in weight up to thirty pounds, is short and thick, somewhat resembling in shape the bream or perch. It is very highly esteemed, and is sometimes brought up to Adelaide in large quantities. The size of the fish, however, and its vigorous resistance when booked, attract the attention of. the sharks which are very common in the gulfs; and the fisherman is often disappointed when about to take in a fish, by an enormous shark relieving him of the trouble....
