Not illustrated. 1901 Excerpt: .recommendation was originally to help to destroy the ferments contained in the fruits or vegetables, but I consider that it has no other meaning than a recommendation to only employ a syrup or brine which is not in a state of fermentation and is not contaminated. If your syrup is light and one or two days old, it is most likely that some bacteria have sprouted, dipping with this syrup would be to introduce the enemy in your fortress, the advice of brining hot will oblige you to boil this syrup and destroy the growth. ANTISEPTIC POWER OF SALT BRINE. The same applies to the salt brine. This brine used to dip the vegetables marks 2 to 3 Beaume; the percentage of salt it contains has sufficient antiseptic strength to prevent the germination of the spores when the adults have been killed by the heat, but it has not sufficient power to prevent the adult to work if they exist in the solution. Therefore should this brine be made with cold water, it would contain all the ferments actually developed in the water and when poured in the cans these ferments will attack the eatables and may produce partial decomposition before the pasteurization is completed by the processing. The brine may not only convey molds and common decomposition bacteria, but also germs and adult pathogenic bacteria (Disease Microbes) and the boiling of the brine is a good precautionary measure. When syrup or brine, after boiling, is...
