Createspace Independent Publishing Platform, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand .There is a global trend every minister must understand. We live in an environment where everything is moving at an astronomical speed-internet age. The global trend has placed you as a minister on a world wide focus. Technology has improved civilization. This is the jet age; it is also the information age. There is so much insight and wisdom emanating from various avenues, print, electronic media (radio/ television), internet technology to mention but a few. You are not in isolation. As a minister, you have been called to have global relevance. The wider the coverage: the wider the patronage. This generation is moved by results, what they can see. This is not the era of analog but a digitalized operation. You must learn to recognize your environment. You are not the John the Baptist crying in the wilderness, you are a 21st century minister. We are in the era of information technology. You cannot afford to be an ignoramus. It is time to give people value for their time. In fact, my friend jokingly stated, these days, it takes a greater effort to fail than to succeed. The fast-changing digital world demands a new approach to the way we structure our ministry and interact with our audience. Ministers must be ready to embrace new ideas and redefine their strategies to the continuing rate of change. The world has changed dramatically, and we must learn to adjust our thinking pattern. In less than two generations, we have moved from the industrial age through the service age, and into the information age. In the information age, knowledge has become the primary resource and the most valuable factor of success. We have moved from...
