ThistleDown Press, United States, 2015. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. Rita Bouvier s third collection of poetry is a response to the highs and lows of life and represents an attempt at restoring order through embracing others, reconciling the traumas caused by the deep scars of history, and soaring beyond life s awkward and painful moments in order to live joyfully. Inspired by the metaphor of a voyageur sustained by song on his journeys up and down the rivers of Northwest Saskatchewan, these quot;songs for the seasonsquot; draw heavily on images from nature as well as the joys, heartaches and transgressions Bouvier has witnessed and experienced as a Métis woman. Using imagery strongly connected to the natural environment, Bouvier evokes earth s regeneration through the seasons as inspiration for moving forward. Whether discussing the joys and trials of family life with poems such as quot;nigosis is sweet and sixteenquot; and quot;my grandmother s handsquot;, offering her own take on history in quot;songs to singquot; and quot;measured timequot;, or exploring Métis identity in quot;I have something important to sayquot; and quot;Indigenous Man 2quot;, Bouvier captures the essence of a life that can be quot;joyful/one minute and then. agonyquot; Yet she always encourages the reader to become quot;caught in the movement and beauty/of life - dance, breathe, listenquot; and, of course, sing.
