White Pine Press, United States, 1995. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book. The poems in this collection by critically-acclaimed Chilean poet, editor and human rights activist Marjorie Agosin reflect her deep-rooted passion for nature, for life, and for being. Agosin creates a world where everything touches the sea and is, in turn, touched by it -- a simple world where when her son is born she asks for a flower, a light, a glass of water . From the child who discovers the sky in water to the young couple who promised to be a single branch of water, one single stream , to the old women making their way toward the sea.to dissolve in the beat of the waves , Agosin fills her world with people who can carry the scents of the river and the sign of the water . Bilingual edition -- text in both English and Spanish.
