Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Brown Alumni Monthly, Vol. 43: Commencement on a War Basis I began to wonder, he said, if after all we were not at war with Britain and the President of the United States. He attacked those who sulked behind the protecting armor of the Bill of Rights. But on traveling throughout the country Reynolds found the people of our country were mad, and an angry democracy has never been beaten. This is a people s war, and the people will either win or lose it. It t too important a war to be fought by generals. We should thank the Japs for reminding us, too, that it is our war. We have a long way to go because we are amateurs in this business of murder. But out of the burning fires of war will emerge a new world in which free men can live without fear. It is for this we fight. Stalin, he said, was the greatest realist of our times, and we should take council with him in working out that peace. President Wriston told the alumni in a trenchant statement his conception of the postulates of peace after the war: world solidarity and the supremacy of spiritual realities. As the nationhood of the United States could not endure half slave and half free, he said, so the peace of the world cannot survive a division in the ideology between the state as master and the state as servant . between the individual as slave, and man as a son of God. Anglo-American domination might start policing, he said, but it would deteriorate into tyranny. Policing must be recognized as a transient...
