Excerpt: . . . meshal or cresset) running before the horses, and holding high his flaming light, was the only object of interest. The gleam cast by the burning wood on his simple but picturesque costume, made him appear as though he too were wearing a holiday garb. The zeffeh, or procession of the bride, from the citadel to her own palace, did not take place until after church on Christmas-day: but I was so completely tired that I could not go to see it; and, therefore, I give you the description which I received from my friends. Though all the inhabitants of Cairo seemed congregated to view it, the zeffeh was not well calculated to gratify the curiosity it excited. It was little more than a mere display of soldiery and carriages: the former, half Europeanized in dress; and the latter, with few exceptions, just such as...
