Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from Facts Founded Upon Parliamentary Returns, Illustrative of the Great Inequality of the Taxes on Houses and Windows: Shewing How Unjustly and Oppressively They Bear Upon the Middle and Industrious Classes It cannot be too often repeated, or too generally known and understood, with a hope view to the removal of the Taxes on Houses and Windows those causes of general dissatisfaction and just complaint amongst the middle and industrious Classes - that the amount of Rental paid for houses is no just criterion or representative of the property and means of the occupier or tenarit; and therefore Rental is not a real and solid basis for Taxation. If no other cause of complaint existed against this mode of Taxation, it would amply suffice to adduce the extensive variations in the value of Houses from locality only. It is well known that Houses in or near Cities and large Towns acquire an infinitely higher value; but does it follow that the Occupants of Houses so situated are possessed of Wealth in proportion to the increased rate...
