The soul has four gates to her hall Set to the four points cardinal: The first is the gate Boreal, The second gate Oriental, The third gate Meridional, The forth, the gate Occidental. Now when these strong winds do arise Which encompass all paradise From the starless caves which see Neither God, nor his enemy, Winds braggart, winds most terrible That in a whining tune do tell Of domed blue vaults so vast, that He Loses from his inventory Many lost souls, and thinks them free, Or obscene winds an entry seek With suppliant clamour, soft and thick Then in fear, and then in hate, She shuts her steel, her silver gate, He gate of brass, her gate of gold About the Publisher Forgotten Books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books.
