Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The American Journal of Surgery, 1905, Vol. 35 It is a matter of lively interest to humanity that the nose do its work well. This interest is so great that it is strange to find that attention to the pathology of the nose is to a great extent a matter of our own generation. In our older medical texts consideration of diseases of the nose covers not more than two or three pages. When many present day practitioners were undergraduate students perhaps one-half of a lecture was devoted to the same subject. But with the accumulation of special knowledge of the past decades growing out of the increase in clinical instruction, a special technique and a rapidly increasing literature has come into existence. With the development of knowledge concerning the nose and its work came a realization that its prominence exposed it to injuries which became the source of other difficulties often not traced to their true source. Breaks, dislocations, and bruises, often looked upon at the time as negligible and of little moment, are...
