Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Analyses of Miscellaneous Food Materials The detailed weights and the results Of the analyses are given in the preceding tables. There is a great similarity in the proportion of shell, white and yolk in the eggs of the different domesticated fowl. Roughly speaking, the shell makes up about one-ninth, the yolk one - third, and the white about five-ninths of the whole eggs. The white of the egg is nearly seven-eighths water. The solids of the white are practically all nitrogenous matters and are some times said to be pure albumen. The Connecticut State Experiment Station has made an extended investigation of the white of hens eggs and finds that it consists of four different though quite closely allied albuminoids. The usual factor for protein (nitrogen multiplied by is apparently too small, and the protein by difference is probably the more accurate. It will be noted that the white of the different kinds of eggs are practically alike in composition and fuel values.
