Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****.Excerpt from An Elementary Manual of Physiology: For Colleges, Schools of Nursing, of Physical Education, and of the Practical Arts The teachers of physiology in our Medical Schools are greatly handicapped at the present time by the fact that the material which must necessarily be presented to the students in preparation for their clinical years, is so complex that it can scarcely be dealt with in detail in the number of hours of teaching ordinarily allotted to this science. It would indeed be very helpful if the matriculates in medicine could also present certain credits in elementary physiology, in addition to those obtained in biology, physics and chemistry. The only objection that might be raised against the establishment of more extensive courses in elementary physiology in colleges is that this change would tend to cause these institutions to lose their identity and purpose even more than they have at the present time. Obviously, a college is intended to disseminate general knowledge and not knowledge of a special or professional type. Thus, a college which permits its matriculates to crowd diverse courses in the fundamental sciences into the first two years of its curriculum and then passes these young men and women on to the medical schools, fails utterly in its purpose as a means of acquiring general culture. It is evident, however, that the mission of physiology is much greater than that of serving as an essential link in the chain of medical subjects, because it also possesses an eminently practical value as a general study. This fact is recognized more and more from year to year. Thus, many States now require elementary courses in physiology in...
