By Howard Lester McKenzie

Forgotten Books, 2018. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****. Excerpt from Biology and Control of Avocado Insects and Mites The greatly increased planting of the avocado in recent years has been accompanied by a corresponding increase in the amount of injury caused by insect pests. Some of the insects attacking the avocado are native to California and others are recorded as being of recent occurrence in the state. These pests include defoliating caterpillars and beetles, a number of scale insects (of which the rather recently recorded latania scale is the most important), the avocado brown mite, and a native species of thrips. The insect pests attacking the avocado in Florida and foreign countries have also been included in this bulletin. In a new industry, such as the California avocado industry, it is important to know what pests occur on the same crop in other sections or countries in order that proper precautions may be taken to guard against the entrance of such insects; a complete list of these is given in a later section. Two important pests of the avocado in California, apparently, have already been introduced from other localities....
