But to the physician of modern times motherhood has been robbed of many of its terrors, and the expectant mother now can joyfully look forward to be conducted safely through the puerperal condition, and fold her new-born babe to her bosom, with the satisfaction of achieving and performing the noblest and highest duty in life and that of love. 87 Washington street. DISCUSSION. Dr. H. O. Pantzer, of Indianapolis: I wish to commend the paper for its earnest discussion of puerperal fever and its advocacy of treatment according to cause. The subject presents many phases, all tempting discussion. I will apply my remarks to the pathology and incidentally to treatment. Our knowledge of the bacteria involved in this affection tells us that both pathogenic and saprophytic bacteria may cause it. Clinical differentiation between the two as yet has been but little attempted, and is not treated in the books. By reasoning on certain known facts I have been able to my satisfaction in certain cases to clearly recognize the class to which in a given case the active bacteria belonged. Commonly speaking, pathogenic bacteria infect the living tissues, and they develop the common symptoms of inflammation--heat, swelling, pain and redness. Some or all of these symptoms will be found present in the perineum, vagina, uterus, broad...
