Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from The Founder s Own Story of the Founding of Vineland, New Jersey Upon my return to Philadelphia I found that Mr. Wood was dis posed to be slow and cautious. His price was exorbitant, to begin with, at that time ten dollars per acre without the timber. I decided, however, to humor him in the negotiations; not to hurry but to call upon him every day. After I had been to see him every day for a week, he decided to visit Hammonton which he did in company with his son Richard. He was more than pleased, - in fact, astonished to see a beautiful place produced in so short a time out of the New Jersey wilderness. It convinced him that I possessed some capacity in that line. He then requested me to go over his tract of land with him again. This time I stopped at his house. His wife was there. In the evening she asked me to describe how one of the avenues in my pro posed colony would look after it was finished. I described it to her as faithfully as I could. The next morning, after I got into the buggy with Mr. Wood, he said he had a little matter to tell me. Said he, My wife awoke me about half past two o clock this morning and said she wished to caution me against making any agreement with you, as she is afraid you are of unsound mind, owing to your description of the avenue last night. She said she had no doubt of your sincerity. But what I wish to say, Mr. Landis, is, that our people, inexperienced in business, have no conception...
