It was once hailed - and some who hear me can remember the time - with emotions too deep for words. The full hearts of men overflowed in the copious, gushing tears of childhood, and silently went up to Heaven on the wings of praise. With their own sweat and their own blood, they had won their inheritance of peace, and they prized it accordingly. They were yet fresh from the great events which we read of as cold matters of history. The storm had passed by, but the swell of the troubled waters, rising in dark heaving ridges, yet marked its duration and violence. All things then wore the beauty of novelty, and long possession had not dulled the sense of enjoyment. The golden light and glittering dews of the morning were above and around them. The...
