Excerpt from Celestial Ejectamenta: The First Halley Lecture Delivered Before the University on Tuesday, May 10, 1910 A combination of interesting circumstances brings me to-day before the members of the University to discourse on an important feature of celestial mechanics which has not hitherto been treated as a generalization drawn from observations on the great scale of nature. While the principle of dualism is abundantly manifest in every department of knowledge and fully recognized in the attractions and repulsions in molecular mechanics, the phenomena of the repulsive energy of celestial bodies have so far been unduly obscured by the more evident principle of the attraction of gravitation. The doctrine that the solar system, as at present constituted, was formed by the successive condensations of a nebular substance rotating about a central position, has now so much evidence in its favour that it may be affirmed to equal the best of that obtained from the geological record of the changes which, in past times, have taken place on the terrestrial globe.
