IN March 1854 Christina returned to London with her father and mother, and went to reside at the house of her brother William, then 45 Upper Albany Street, but now 166 Albany Street, Regent s Park. Here, only a month afterwards, in April 1854, her father died. For a while there was no material alteration either in the circumstances or in the prospects of the family. Christina wrote, though she did not publish, much poetry, and also some prose. Respecting some of her miscellaneous writings Mr. W. M. Rossetti has written to me: There are many articles by C[hristina] on Italian writers and other celebrities in a cyclopaedia called the Imperial Dictionary of Biography and edited by Dr. Waller. She undertook something (and may possibly have executed it) for [the Rev. Dr.] Grosart s edition of Spenser. . . . Towards 1855 a Translation was published of the Memoirs of Mallet du Pan part of this was...
