Excerpt from The Ficus Elastica in Burma Proper or a Narrative of My Journey in Search of It: A Descriptive Account of Its Habits of Growth and the Process Followed by the Kakhyens in the Preparation of Caoutchouc The introductory chapter sufficiently accounts for the delay in the submission of my MSS. to the press in the first instance, it therefore now only remains for me to explain the reason for so many months having elapsed before the completion of the work. The nature of my official duties demanding my presence in the districts for protracted periods, it was not until my return to headquarters, after gaps of two or three months, that I was in a position to revise proofs and sanction their being finally struck off. Unfortunately, at such intervals, it often so happened that the Government Press was over-crowded with other work, or that there was a deficiency of the type in which this report is printed: thus, when I was in a position to push on the work, the press was not available; or vice versa, and so on this see-saw game was maintained, until more than one reminder from Government brought forth an order from the Secretariat, that my report was to keep pace with other official publications, which resulted in the completion of the last four chapters within the last six months.
