Even in cases where annual statements are published, they are often too complex for the laymen to understand. The innocent investors, depositors or other creditors must, therefore, look to the State for assurance that certain financial institutions are conducted upon sound business principles. Publicity enforced by the State is becoming more and more essential to secure honest management and safety of investments and to protect the general public. Now, the ordinary police officers and magistrates are not competent to execute such laws as may be enacted for this purpose. Recourse must..
