Praxiology is like the prose of Moliere s The Prodigious Snob: everybody uses it but few can define it. That task fell to the famous Polish philosopher and logician, Tadeusz Kotarbinski. He noted that praxiology deals with doing and working from the point of view of effectiveness. It has three components: analysis of concepts involving purposive actions; critique of modes of action from the viewpoint of efficiency; and normative advisory aspects in recommendations for increasing efficiency. Increasingly, praxiology has focused on the social sciences, since both have a strong sense of knowledge and its applications. In this encyclopedic effort, the editors, aided by a remarkable group of international scholars, convened a meeting to examine fundamental issues in the theory of human action, the nature of economics, and theoretical issues in such praxiological disciplines as design, accounting, market mechanisms, management, and planning. This is a breakthrough volume in its combination and permutation of fault lines in the logic of scientific inquiry and the newer aspects of social action. It is graced with pioneering, new papers on Methodological Foundations of Economics by Herbert A. Simon; Appropriate Methods for the Studies of the Economy by Kenneth E. Boulding; The Role of the Uncertainty Principle in Economics by George J. Klir; Problems of Market Forecasting by Donald N. McCloskey; Rights as Social Practices by Beth J. Singer; and The Crisis of Professional Knowledge by Donald A. Schon. The volume thoroughly integrates European, British, and American scholarship in advanced areas of philosophy and decision-theory. Contributions cover a broad area of economics: from criticism of institutional economics to examination of...
