Artists interested in the League give their time without charge for instruction. There is a monthly meeting of the members for business and relaxation, and once a year the Drawn by Clara Weaver Parrish GOING TO MAREET. season ends with a ball in fancy dresses. The League has a library and reading-room; during the last year it has saved so much on its various cooperative departments as to permit of a reduction of the fees from pupils, and an increase of wages to models and servants. A word as to the school day. What are called antique classes, that is, elementary classes in drawing, are in progress morning, afternoon and night. Two painting classes, which are practically for instruction in portraiture, are in session every morning, two every afternoon. At 4.30 P.m. two sketch classes begin work from the draped model. Of life classes working from the nude or draped model there are no less than eleven daily; namely, six in the morning, two in the afternoon, and three at night. Drawri by Maud Stimun. sweet Eeveey. These classes vary from fifteen to thirty in number, according to the size of the room. Details like these are necessary in order to understand how so many pupils are able to get instruction in that small portion of the Fine Arts Society, where the League disposes of 12,000 square feet of floor only, and also how it is that the...
