GOODSSELL OBSERVATORY OF CARLETON COLLEGE, NORTHFIELD, MINNESOTA. The research work of this observatory is at present devoted almost exclusively to solar and celestial photography. A few micrometric observations of double stars and comets are made with the sixteen-inch refractor on nights unsuitable for photography. Daily photographs of the Sun have been taken whenever possible since 1889. The approximate measures of the photographs taken from 1889 to 1893 were published last summer in Publication No. 3 of Goodsell Observatory. There are on hand something like 1,200 solar photographs taken since 1893, which have not been measured because of the lack of the necessary funds for assistance, the time of the two professors being fully occupied with their duties in the instruction of the college classes, and the work of editing Popular Astronomy. So far as his strength would permit, Professor Wilson has given his time on the moonless clear nights to long-exposure photographs with the eight-inch Clark refractor, the six-inch Brashear star-camera, and the 23-inch Darlot camera. These three instruments are on the same mounting and are guided by means of a five-inch telescope fastened rigidly to the eightinch and of the same focal length with it. Most of the photographs have been of four or eight hours exposure, the latter requiring two nights. The most successful one of the Andromeda Nebula received twelve hours exposure, requiring four nights work. The longest attempted exposure with the eight-inch was one of seventeen hours on the Pleiades,...
