For there the mode of burial is different, the sense, The feelings, all are wrung. The forms before us now Are dressed with all the gentleness, the billows will allow. The infant laid, as if asleep, upon its mother's breast, But oh ! my heart is sick and sad, how can I tell the rest? Canvas close around was sewed, then weighted at the feet, The bodies on a board are placed; preparations are complete; And the forms we lov'd and valued, alas! they soon must be Committed to the merciless, the deep and yawning sea. They now are borne upon the deck, with due solemnity We follow them with feelings sad, the burial to see. The dedicat'ry rites and prayer are by the Priesthood said, And we proceed, with sorrow now, to bury these, our dead. Reluctantly the board is raised across the vessel's side, And being gently tilted, down the bodies swiftly slide Into the open water; and now the rippling wave, Receives them with a plash, then closes o'er their grave. But there's comfort in the thought that God, our God, has said, That yet the sea at his mandate, again will yield its dead; And knowing that the God we serve, is truth, as well as love, We bow to Him, who ruleth here, as in the realms above. Then in confidence to our Father, and to our God we prayed, That our...
