Murdock took it from the detective, closely examined it, comparod it with the hole rent in the pants, and finally said: Yes, there s no doubt that this is the very button and piece of cloth torn from my trousers. Where were you yesterday? Nowhere except at the camp, until we moved here. Are you positive of that? Certainly. I could swear to it. Murdock, I think you are lying. Sir! exclaimed the bookkeeper, assuming an injured air. You heard what I said. Now, don t get insulting, Brady. I can prove you are a liar. If you don t, you ll have to apologize to me. That s a go. See here, Harry. Well? asked the boy. Where did you find this button? In this hut, beside the corpse of Simon Danford. At what time? In the morning, when we first discovered the corpse. At that time had we notified the campers of our discovery of the crime? No. It was before we went back to camp, told them, and brought them to this hut, replied Young King Brady. The old detective bent a sarcastic smile upon Murdock, and said: You claimed that you were not away from the camp till we moved here. If that ain t a lie, how did this button get here before we found Danford lying slain on the floor? Recollect, now, you had those pants on all day...
