Forgotten Books, 2017. Paperback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book  Print on Demand . Excerpt from Walking in the Lake District IT was said of the great Jebb that such time as he could rescue from the adornment of his person he devoted to the neglect of his duties. Under distractions no less perplexing, though in kind not similar, I have compiled these tattered chapters. I have written of the Lake country partly in wrath, because it was a rash promise to make a book about it, but more in happiness and mixed feelings are, they say, the proper attitude to a loved object. For yourself, reader, my hope is that the book may stir, or else maintain, your interest in the greatest of our future National Parks, and that you will do something to create these. Many now preach the gospel Preserve the countryside Let us then preserve it in the best possible way, by teaching as many as we can to use and value it not by locking it up, or by making a museum of it, a kind of spectacle which a man looks at with his hat tipped well back on his head, as if it were a sacred picture or some holy survival from a better past Visi tors are requested not to touch the countryside. -none the less, born and confined as now we, are, among a discipline of bricks and mortar, or at best among the sham gentilities of the Tudor tea-shop style, our problem is not easy there is a risk, a certain crudeness in us. But we can only learn liberty by the use of liberty and until we get this free access to the open country backagain into our city life, we shall be still unsatisfied. For...
