Excerpt from The Lost Sheep: A Sermon Preached on the Feast of St. Luke the Evangelist, at the Opening of St. Paul s Church, Brighton St. Paul wrote, Luke, the beloved physician, and Demas, greet you but six years afterwards, in his second imprisonment, he had need to change his voice and say, Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world. Only Luke is with me. Blessed companions! In life united, in death inseparable; partakers of the Gospel and of life, of the cross and of the kingdom, and now, in heavenly bliss, they together follow their Master whithersoever He goeth, and their names ?oat down to us upon the memory of the Church with the halo of saints and the crown of martyrdom. Today we unite them again, as in life they loved to be. But there is another fitness which I may not fail to note. St. Luke has ever had a name for skill in human science. In the world he was known for arts which grace our nature with cul ture and refinement. With his memory has ever...
