Dept. of Justice, Office of Community Oriented Policing Services, 2001 OCLC Number: (OCoLC)48748797 Subject: Drug traffic -- United States. Excerpt: . . . The Problem of Drug Dealing in Privately Owned Apartment Complexes 3 Factors Contributing to Drug Dealing in Privately Owned Apartment Complexes Understanding the factors that contribute to your problem will help you frame your own local analysis questions, determine good effectiveness measures, recognize key intervention points, and select appropriate responses. What We Know About Drug Dealing in Privately Owned Apartment Complexes Apartment complexes can harbor two main types of drug markets - open and closed. In open markets, dealers sell to all potential customers, screening out only those suspected of being police or some other threat. In closed markets, dealers sell only to people they know or to those vouched for by 2 other buyers. In choosing between two evils, closed markets pose less threat to a community than open markets. Open markets in apartment complexes are much more susceptible to drive-by shootings, customers who care little about the property, and customers who use drugs on the property. In comparison, closed-market dealers are generally averse to attracting attention to their operation, so they often keep their customers behavior in line. Certain conditions make privately owned apartment complexes in low-income, high-crime neighborhoods susceptible to open-market drug dealing. These conditions are outlined below. Tenants and nearby residents with drug histories. Chronic users often live near their markets so they can readily buy drugs. This helps sustain the market. Also, drug markets in low-income neighborhoods can provide a source of part- This item ships from La Vergne, TN. Paperback.
